GETTING BASKETS — Joyce Lee, an aging program staffer, hands out Easter baskets to senior citizens prior to the egg hunt last Thursday. Over 300 eggs were dyed and hidden along the first fairway at the country club golf course. Residents of the KM Convalescent Center joined the hunt.

Senior Citizens Have A Fun Day

Two hundred senior citizens and residents of Kings Mountain Convalescent Center enjoyed an Easter Egg Hunt Thursday on the No. One Fairway at Kings Mountain Country Club Golf Course.

It was a fun day.

The outing was sponsored by Kings Mountain Convalescent Center, Kings Mountain Aging Program and Cleveland Food Program.

A total of 3260 beautifully decorated Easter eggs were placed in hidden spots around the golf course and ten of the eggs were numbered with prizes going to the persons finding them, said Rev. Kenneth George, director of the Aging Program.

Prizes were chocolate rabbits, eggs, and various other Easter treats.

A jelly bean guessing contest was also held and a $5 cash award went to the winner.

Refreshments were served.
