Herbs Can Keep Your Heart Beating

If you're like most people, your experience with herbs is probably confined to glancing over the spice shelf at the grocery store or tossing a dash of that or this into the stew.

But herbs aren't limited to the grocery shelf or the stew pot. Besides making food taste better, they can keep your heart beating, make your hair shiny, dye your clothes, keep away mosquitoes. And on top of that, you can grow them in your backyard or window sill.

Herbs, mankind's useful companion since the dawn of time, will get a special treatment at "The Southern Living Show," the South's annual Salute to Spring, running Feb. 24-March 4 at the Merchandise Mart.

Volunteers from the North Carolina Botanical Garden in Chapel Hill are preparing an herb garden for the show. The garden will include herbs easily grown in this area, including culinary, medicinal and industrial herbs, plus lots of interesting things you can do with herbs right in your own backyard.

The garden is designed to be a teaching garden, and each day during the show, volunteers from the Botanical Garden will give mini-programs on herbs.

You'll learn all sorts of herb secrets. For instance, "Pennyroyal" keeps away mosquitoes. Basil can be used as a salt substitute in salt-free diets.

Sage keeps away the cabbage butterfly. At present, the mini-lessons are scheduled each day for 11 a. m. and 2 p. m., Sundays 2 p. m. only. The schedule shapes up like this: Feb. 24, Medicinal Herbs; Feb. 25, Propagation and Soil Mix, Feb. 26, Growing Herbs in Shade; Feb. 27, Pest Control and Companion Planting; Feb. 28, Herbs in the Home; March 1, Culinary Herbs, March 2, Indians' Use of Herbs, March 3, Identification of Herbs; March 4, Dyes.

Besides the herb garden, you'll find lots of other gardens, filled with tulips, azaleas, dogwoods, daffodils and dozens of other blossoms that make springtime special.

The Decor Pavilion is jammed with fresh, exciting and affordable decorating ideas. There will be 15 special rooms, including three bathrooms featuring the latest designs and colors. A spa and a greenhouse-dining room are just a few of special "extras" in a Pavilion that will show you how to fix-up your home from one end to the other.

The show also includes a standard flower show presented by the Charlotte Council of Garden Clubs, an expanded orchid pavilion, a craft section, a lawn and garden equipment area and the Gardener's Marketplace where you can buy plants and just about every accessory to go with them.

So hang up your top coat and forget about winter for a day. Spring has sprung at "The Southern Living Show."

Admission is $3 for adults and $2.50 for senior citizens (age 65 and up) and youths (age 10-18). Children under 10, excluding groups, get in free with an adult.

Show hours are 10 a. m. to 9 p. m. daily, Sundays noon to 6 p. m.
