

MADD Chapters Being Urged

RALEIGH—The Governor's Highway Safety Commission, pushing ahead on programs designed to help reduce the number of drinking drivers, passed a resolution in its quarterly meeting on June 21 commending the organization known as MADD (Mothers Against Drunk Drivers), and called on citizens to "form chapters in every county in North Carolina."

MADD was started in California and chapters are now springing up along the East Coast. Mrs. Marlyn Sugg of Albemarle, president of the Stanley County Chapter, spoke to the Commission. She said that another chapter is operating in Richmond County, and that 23 others are in various stages of being organized.

The Commission also previewed a new slide show—DUI Killers, Time for Action—which will soon be available for public showing.

Floyd E. (Sam) Bass, who is with the Governor's Highway Safety Program, is serving as liaison with MADD. Persons wanting information about the organization, or about the new slide show, can contact him at GHSP, 215 East Lane Street, Raleigh, N.C. 27601; or call him at (919) 733-3083.

across the region to provide teachers with information on exceptional children.

For the past three years she has been Coordinator of Exceptional Children's Programs in Kings Mountain District Schools. During this time several changes have occurred in the program. Programs for the Academically Talented have been established in grades K-9, and a Summer Enrichment Program has been provided for grades 4-9. A model program, Secondary Learning Disabilities, was adopted at Central School, Kings Mountain Junior High School, and Kings Mountain Senior High School. Educational diagnosticians were added to provide assistance in testing all exceptional children. A process for organizing student records and coordination consisted of a consistent referral to placement process were implemented. Ms. Shields provided a variety of workshops for teachers and has actively involved parents in Programs for Exceptional Children. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Russell Cabe, Ms. Shields is a native of Franklin, North Carolina. She is a resident of Kings Mountain and is active in First Presbyterian Church, where she is a choir member and Bible Moderator for Circle 5.

Eyes need extra summer care

The "eyes have it!" They get radiated, chlorinated, reflected upon, glared on, windblown, pollenated and salted.

For summer-time protection, select a good pair of drugstore sunglasses which block out ultra-violet and infra-red rays, are shatter-resistant, and distortion-free.

To refresh and relax your eyes use eye drops, regularly. Simply tilt head back, close eyes, drop two drops in the inner corners of eyes, and then open lids to allow drops to seep naturally into eye. The feeling is euphoric!
