Calling Card Phone Service Added

Computer and telecommunications technologies have been brought together in Southern Bell's new automated operator service introduced today in the Kings Mountain area.

The new feature called Calling Card Service is designed to make operator assisted calling easier, faster and less expensive for customers who prefer not to make regular, direct-dialed calls.

T.M. Graham, company spokesman in Kings Mountain, said that many customers, especially tourists and business travelers prefer to make telephone calls that require operator assistance. With Calling Card Service, customers who have telephone company calling cards—formerly called credit cards—can make calling card calls from any telephone, public or private, equipped for Touch Tone dialing.

"All functions that an operator would normally handle like validating calling card numbers and recording of billing information will all be handled by CCS computers in Greensboro and Raleigh," Graham said.

A customer making a call from a public telephone would dial zero and the number they wish to reach. After the number is dialed they will hear a distinctive tone followed by a recording asking them to key in the calling card number.

Customers who call from a residence or business phone will only hear the distinctive tone.

After the calling card number is keyed in, the CCS computer will almost instantaneously validate the number through another computer located in Oklahoma City. If the calling card number is valid, the customer's call will then be allowed to proceed.

Customers who experience difficulty in making an automated call can reach an operator for assistance simply by pressing the Zero button after the tone or recorded announcement. Also, an operator will automatically come on the line to assist if the customer does not key in a calling card number or zero within five seconds after the tone or announcement.

"We believe Calling Card Service will benefit customers in significant ways," Graham said. "First of all it will make calling faster since call processing is almost instantaneous. Billing will also be improved since the possibility of human error is reduced considerably."

"The major advantage will be the cost of calling. In North Carolina, the lower cost of handling calling card calls is reflected in lower operator-assistance charges for in-state calls—30 cents for customer-dialed calling card calls compared to 70 cents for collect or other station calls and $1.70 for person to person calls."

Reduced operator-assistance charges are also in effect for calling card calls made to points outside North Carolina.

Graham said that Southern Bell and rate payers in general will benefit from CCS since such state-of-the-art technology helps to stem the rising cost of providing telecommunications services through increased productivity and lower operating costs.

According to Graham, CCS is the latest step in Southern Bell's efforts to improve operator services in North Carolina begun in August, 1971 when its computerized, all-electronic Traffic Service Position System was first introduced in Raleigh. Plans call for CCS to be made available in all of Southern Bell's North Carolina service area by the end of June.

Graham said that customers who have rotary dial telephones will not have access to the automated CCS. However, they will still be able to use their calling card numbers for customer-dialed, operator assisted calls and will be billed at the lower calling card rate.

Summer Camp Is Scheduled

BOILING SPRINGS—Cleveland County Schools will sponsor a three-week summer camp for students enrolled in the Student Transition Program.

The camp will be held at Gardner-Webb College, July 5-23. Thirty boys and girls will receive remedial help in reading and math, swimming lessons will be taught and field trips will be included in the camp experience.

Major emphasis will be on academics, health education and self-concept. Guest speakers will give presentations to the campers.

The Student Transition Program is a federally funded program for children who have moved into the county within the past six years and are able to meet other qualifications of the program.

In order to qualify for the camp, these students must demonstrate a need for extra help in reading and math.

The summer enrichment program is being held in conjunction with the Summer Food Program for children. This is a federally funded program that ensures proper nutrition for children during the months when school is not in session.

The Student Transition Program is under the directorship of Dr. A. Mickey Church and coordinated by Mrs. Evelyn Chapman.
