she checked with Andrew Vanory, the School Law expert with the Attorney General's office, and Vanory said that when people come to file for the outside city seats they must designate which seat they are seeking. If all persons who file seek the six-year seat, he said the Kings Mountain School Board must then re-appoint someone to fill Lineberger's seat until the next general election, which would be a year later. The next year, if no one seeks the remaining one-year on Lineberger's term, the School Board must again appoint someone to fill the remaining year.

In his letter of resignation, which was presented to Board Chairman June Lee, Lineberger said "it has been an honor and pleasure to serve" the school district. He said he felt like he had benefited from the experience and that his children had received a first-rate education in the Kings Mountain System. "We will always call Kings Mountain home," he said. herald school bd.
