Fulton Hands Treasury Of Church To His Son

By ELIZABETH GAMBLE

W.S. "Bill" Fulton Jr. was honored recently at Boyce Memorial Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church upon completion of his 30th year as church treasurer.

Members recognized his ability in keeping excellent record, making accurate reports, his promptness in paying all obligations, and his outstanding knowledge of financial commitments of the local church as well as Synod's budget.

"The church is deeply indebted to Bill for his patience and integrity, his loyalty and faithfulness, for his labor of love which required endless hours, and for his attitude of serving the Lord with gladness," Rev. William Tyson, pastor, said.

Under Fulton's management, the church maintained a good paying record, a reputation for which the church is justly proud.

As an expression of love and gratitude for his well-performed duties, the church presented Fulton with a handsome gift. The presentation was made by Rev. Tyson.

In receiving the gift, Fulton noted that he had never had an unpleasant experience with any member and expressed his appreciation for the cooperation and support he received.

His son, W.S. "Corky" Fulton III, was elected treasurer and has officially assumed his duties. He holds the distinction of being a double fourth generation treasurer of Boyce Memorial and is carrying on the tradition with the same fine leadership that his illustrious forbearers gave.

Preceding him as treasurers were W.S. Fulton Jr., his father; W.S. Fulton Sr., his grandfather; W.P. Fulton, his great-great uncle; and W.A. Ware, his great-grandfather.

Corky Fulton is married to the former Barbara Hord and is the father of a son, W.S. Fulton IV, and a daughter, Charlotte Hord Fulton.
