CORRECTION

Due to incorrect information supplied by the funeral home, last week's obituary on Mrs. Sara Boyd stated that she is survived by six sisters. It should have said six daughters. Also, Mrs. Delores Edgerton and Mrs. Brenda Wright should have been listed as residents of Kings Mountain rather than Charlotte.

Policeman Needs Info

Kings Mountain policeman Bob Hayes is asking for information concerning a child who was hit by a car at 2:30 p.m. Monday in the parking lot of Pine Manor Apartments.

Hayes said six-year-old Donisha Latreas Ross of 81 Pine Manor was playing with her seven-year-old sister when she was struck by a car.

Hayes said the child's leg was bruised but she was not seriously injured. The two children were the only persons in the area at the time. Their only description of the car was that it was a "small, red car," Hayes said.

Hayes said the driver might not be aware that he struck the child.

Anyone with information concerning a small red car which was in the area that day is asked to contact Hayes at the Kings Mountain Police Department (739-3636). All information given will be confidential.

Energy

Tuesday night. The committee will seek volunteers to help weather strip the homes of elderly and handicapped, and will work closely with area churches to ascertain the needs of the people.

The program is scheduled to be kicked off by February 1. The city will have the services of Sanford and Turner through March 31. They will take an account of all energy used in the city's buildings and vehicles and advise the town of ways it can cutback. "Honestly, it's just a simple truth that we don't know all the technology about all the equipment we use in our daily living," Mayor John Moss said.

"There are a lot of things people can do to conserve at little or no cost," Dickey said. "Of course, the more you do the more it will cost."

"The members of the committee are very concerned about the cost of energy," he added. "We feel like we can make a worthwhile contribution."

Also recognized were the outgoing board members, whose terms expired this year. They are Doyle Campbell, Burris Ramey, Gary Whitaker, and Larry Hamrick, Jr.
