Rules to avoid heat stroke
 Heat stroke, or sunstroke, occurs when the body can no longer rid itself of excess heat. It is caused as a result of excessive sweating and a consequent loss of body fluids and potassium with a resulting salt and chloride imbalance in the blood.
 To avoid heatstroke work gradually into heavy exercise such as football practice and steer clear of continuous potassium - depleting perspiration. Eat fresh fruits for liquids daily, and refuse "quick energy" sugary snacks which may lower blood sugar.
