Immunology is progressing so quickly, that we hope for rapid progress in controlling the spread of infectious AIDS (acquired immunodeficiency syndrome).
 Most health officials believe AIDS is caused by a virus. Its victims suffer from a variety of severe infections, with death the final victor. Symptoms include swollen lymph glands, rapid weight loss, fever, chronic diarrhea, skin blotches, prolonged fatigue, cough and shortness of breath while at rest.
 So far, highest risk groups include homosexuals, intravenous drug users, bleeders, and Haitians.
