Everyone Should See 'The Day After'

To The Editor:

We in the Office of Emergency Management are very pleased so many people watched the film "The Day After". It is our opinion the film should be seen by everyone, not only here in the United States, but throughout the world.

We hope the film has resulted in an increased public awareness and concern about our nation's capabilities for survival. The need for preparedness in terms of adequate shelter, food supplies and medical attention was graphically portrayed by their shortages. Also portrayed was the need to provide the American people the necessary training and education so that we would all be able to contribute to our own protection in conjunction with the plans provided by local, state and national levels of government.

The question posed in the film by the wife of Dr. Oakes when she asked "What if it does happen, what do we do?" is a question we should each ask. We hope American people will become more interested in finding the answer to this question.

Here in Cleveland County we have approximately 78,000 shelter spaces already designated with more spaces available in buildings which have not been surveyed. Because of distance, people in Upper Cleveland County should give consideration to home shelters. And, of course, we all need to know which shelter we would go, how to get there, and what to take with us.

The Office of Emergency Management is here to assist citizens of Cleveland County in anyway possible. We welcome your questions, comments and suggestions for making Cleveland County a safer place to live.
