A Big Invitation For Big Project

Over the years a number of invitations of all descriptions have come across my desk at the Herald but Tuesday morning when Ellen (Mrs. Garland) Atkins brought the morning's mail it contained one of the most unique invitations we have seen at the Herald.

The invitation was contained in a brown cardboard box large enough to hold a gift item. Rolled up inside the box was a three foot long by six inch wide royal blue tall tower imprinted on blue paper with "A Towerful Reception" at the top of the invitation announcing WBTV's plans to celebrate the "2,000 feet of electric excitement and a new era in television in the Carolinas" on Nov. 1 at the Radisson Plaza Hotel in Charlotte. The 2,000 foot tower was first completed.

Although the package was not a "gift" we appreciated the nice gesture.

Jane (Mrs. Jerry) King, West School Principal, got a surprise on her birthday Tuesday. Her 300 pupils sang "Happy Birthday" to her in unison over the intercom system. "It's really been a very special Tuesday at West School", according to Mary Evelyn (Mrs. Jim) Anthony, school secretary.

On Wednesday, Kings Mountain District teachers, aides and staffers were treated to "Apples for A Day" compliments of the local Alpha Delta Kappa Chapter during the celebration of National ADK Week in Kings Mountain. More than 300 red, shiny apples from Lutz Orchards were being distributed at the various school plants on Wednesday to recognize school personnel for their efforts in the betterment of education.

MOON OVER KM - A full moon sits over Kings Mountain's John Gamble Stadium Friday night as the KMHS band plays for homecoming festivities at halftime of the football game between Kings Mountain and North Gaston. The old saying that strange things happen when the moon's full held true as North Gaston, which managed only 59 yards total offense, scored a 14-7 victory over a KMHS team which ran up almost 300 yards total offense.
