Customers May Deduct Sales Tax

Effective in January, Duke Power residential customers in North Carolina may be able to treat a portion of their electric bills as a deduction on federal income tax forms, the company announced today.

Legislation passed by the 1984 General Assembly (House Bill 1513) provides that, without materially changing the total bill, a 3 percent sales tax on electricity used on or after Jan. 1 will be listed on North Carolina residential electric bills.

"This is a break for our customers who itemize sales tax deductions on their federal income tax returns," said Duncan Lennon, vice president and tax counsel. "The new sales tax can be itemized, just as any other state sales tax."

"It's not an additional charge," he said. "While there may be some minor adjustments upward because federal facilities, such as courthouses, are exempt from state taxes, our customers' bills should change very little-in most cases, less than five cents a month."

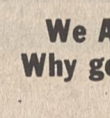

The sales tax was constructed by redesigning a 6 percent "gross receipts" tax that had been included in electric rates. The new law cuts the gross receipts tax approximately in half-and electric rates are lowered accordingly-then adds the 3 percent sales tax.

The money collected by the gross receipts and sales taxes goes to the state of North Carolina.
