Home-canners are cautioned
Botulism is not your everyday disease. Yet, with the canning season in full swing, be cautious. Toxins produced by botulism bacteria may cause headaches, dizziness, visual and swallowing problems, and paralysis, progressing even to death. While antitoxin is available, full recovery may take years. As usual, the best cure is prevention. So, "home-canners" are cautioned to use only specially designed home-canning jars, new, unused lids, and strict compliance to canning directions. No shortcuts. Just like your medications, be sure to follow instructions explicitly.
