At Governor's School

Three rising seniors at Kings Mountain Senior High School are attending the 23rd session of the Governor's School of North Carolina for gifted and talented high school students.

They are Karen Biddix, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Biddix of Kings Mountain; Lisa Hambricht, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Al Hambricht of Grover; and Jennifer Bradley, daughter of Robert and Jean Bradley of Kings Mountain.

The 400 students attending the six-week summer residential program, which began June 23 and continues through August 3, are selected on the basis of high intellectual ability in an academic field or exceptional talent in one of the performing arts.

Initiated in 1963, the Governor's School seeks to introduce students to twentieth century theories about art, science, and humanities and to help them develop critical thought processes, leadership and independence.

Broyhill Testifies At Hearing

WASHINGTON—"If current import trends continue, by 1995 our nation will no longer have a textile industry," Congressman James T. Broyhill (R-NC), said Monday in testimony before a United States Senate subcommittee.

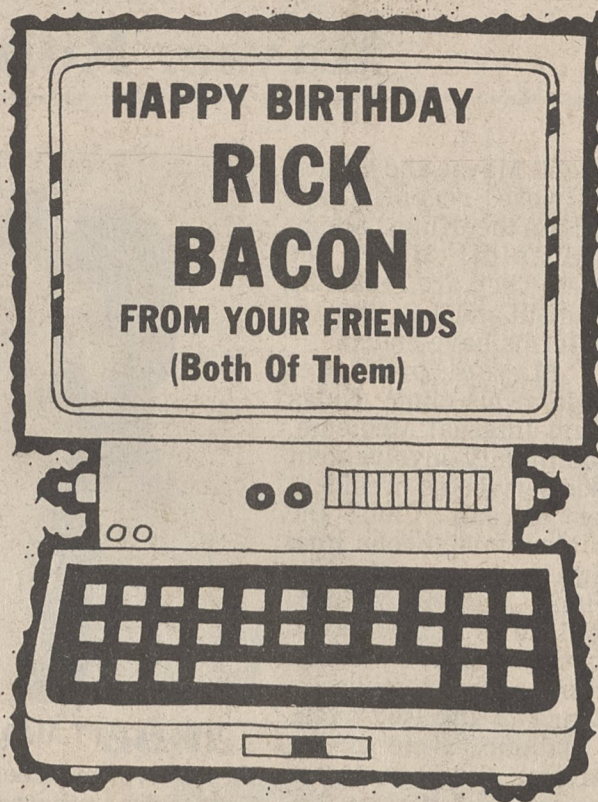

Broyhill made his comments in support of the Textile and Apparel Trade Enforcement Act of 1985, which he introduced in March. His remarks before the Senate Finance Committee's Subcommittee on International Trade were intended to highlight the need for strong action to stem the flow of imported textile and apparel products into the United States.

According to Broyhill, the threat to the U.S. textile, fiber and apparel industry has reached a critical stage, and domestic manufacturers have already been forced to lay off hundreds of thousands of employees due to unfair and illegal import practices.

"Last year, in North Carolina alone, 43 plants closed, displacing 18,000 workers," the 12-term Representative said. In Broyhill's view, the Textile and Apparel Trade Enforcement Act is "important to this nation's economy as well as to more than two million textile and apparel employees across the nation."

Broyhill was joined at the Senate hearing by Senator Jesse Helms (R-NC), Ninth District Congressman Alex McMillan, and by South Carolina Senators Strom Thurmond and Ernest Hollings.

The Textile and Apparel Trade Enforcement Act has been co-sponsored by a majority of the members of both the Senate and the House of Representatives.
