Local Church Groups Attend Outdoor Drama

"From This Day Forward", an outdoor drama about the Waldensians of Valdeese, was attended by two groups from First Presbyterian Church and Dixon Presbyterian Church last week.

The Dixon group also toured the Waldensian Museum and had supper in Valdeese. The Museum is housed in the old Presbyterian church and the history of the Waldensian Presbyterian Church, now a membership of 580, is intertwined with the history of the town and the drama. One example of this is the fact that when it was apparent that the community could not survive based economically on agriculture, the church loaned money to help start industry. In education and industry, as well as in the religious life of the community, the church served and serves today as the center of Waldensian life in Valdeese.

Many customs brought from Italy were retained in the church until 1921, when changes were begun. Some of those changes: the offering was to be collected in the pews during the service instead of at the door as the congregation departed; the sacrament of the Lord's supper would be observed while the congregation remained seated in the pews, being waited on by elders; men and women would no longer sit on opposite sides of the church; Until 1922 the services were conducted in French.
