Jim Hardin Is Honored As Top Tax Collector

RALEIGH—James M. Hardin, who recently retired as tax collector for Cleveland County, was honored as the state's Outstanding County Tax Collector for 1985. He received the award at the 78th Annual Conference of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners. Hardin was first hired as assistant county tax collector in 1964 and was promoted to head of the department in 1966. During his years of service, Hardin was active in the state Association of County Tax Collectors, serving as the president in 1979. He also was appointed by former Gov. Jim Hunt to serve on the State Land Records Advisory Committee. Hardin devoted his early years to service in the U.S. Air Force. He retired from the service as a lieutenant colonel in 1964. A Cleveland County native, he attended Mars Hill College and married Betty Falls from Kings Mountain. They have two grown sons, Jimmy and Bill, and one granddaughter.

Summer Graduation Is Held At Gardner-Webb

BOILING SPRINGS, NC—Gardner-Webb College's graduate program awarded 39 candidates the master of arts degree at summer commencement exercises Aug. 3, marking the 138th graduate from the college. "I have a very special feeling about these students watching them walk across the stage," said Dr. Gilmer Blackburn, director of graduate studies. The program is coordinated from the Boiling Springs campus but has the programs at three satellite campuses including Iredell, McDowell

Richmond/Moore counties. "We feel that actively promoting a master's degree program benefits society," Blackburn said. "We took a needs analysis and found a sufficient need to institute this program. All of these teachers have found that they are better teachers because of the program."

The goal of the master of arts program at G-W is to offer students opportunities for advanced study. Each two-year program is designed to accommodate the employed teacher's schedule and consists of 30 semester hours in three basic areas: professional, instructional and content components.
