praised value of the property. The property owners will have 120 days to answer the town's resolutions. If a property owner decides to sue the town over the price, the court will decide a fair value. If it comes to more than the appraised price, the town will pay the difference.

"I think every appraisal was on the high side, and I can't see us having to pay anyone more than the appraised figures," Neisler said.

In a related matter, the town authorized Neisler to make an offer to a property owner for street right of way on Pine Street. Acquiring that right of way is necessary to have an entrance to a pump station.

In other action Monday, the board approved a revision in the proposed recreation park plan to include a picnic shelter and multi-purpose building at difference locations in the park.

Mayor Bill McCarter suggested moving the picnic shelter, which will be a 24 by 30 feet structure, to the wooded area of the park. That move, he said, would remove the shelter which is expected to be used largely by a senior citizens group, away from the ballfields which will be used mainly by younger people.

The multi-purpose building, which will include two restrooms, concession stand and storage room, will be located near the two ballfields. The town also plans a tennis court at the site.

The town is seeking the help of the National Guard in building the complex and McCarter said he hopes to hear by the Guard by the end of the week.

of the San Juan River by the Contras, along with 18 newsmen.

Ruth Gamble, member of El Bethel Church of Kings Mountain, remembers Golden as a "young man of much compassion and well liked in the church and community." Golden, according to his Kings Mountain friends, was always doing things for the sick and shut-in and the elderly. "He was very kind and everyone in our church liked him and hated to see him move on. Jake wanted to go where there was a higher need", said Mrs. Gamble.

Golden's parents, Rev. and Mrs. J.B. Golden, Sr., of Asheville's Central United Methodist Church, have received a flood of calls from area people and said they deeply appreciated their concern for their son, who they said had their support. Golden had taken a leave of absence for one year to serve in Nicaragua with the Witness for Peace organization whose work is what the name implies. He and the others live and work and play with the people, mostly peasants, in the frontier villages where there is much suffering, working with farmers in the fields, ministering to children. Some of his friends and family recently sent Golden color books and crayons and other essentials for a large group of children in that area.

Witness for Peace has brought in the past two years more than 1,500 people from the U.S. to hold vigils and prayer sessions in tense areas of Nicaragua and these participants fund their own trips.

The Witness for Peace activists are in Nicaragua to protest the Reagan administration's expressed support for the contras, and to campaign for peace between the United States and Nicaragua.

Friends of Golden say he knew the risks when he signed up with Witness for Peace but he wanted to go.

Grover Sewer Contract Okayed

Ollis pointed out that the federal 201 study previously tied Grover into the Kings Mountain area for waste processing. He said he doubted that Grover could get EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) backing for its own wastewater treatment plant.

Kelly made a rebuttal, saying that "I would have to see that in writing. I don't believe federal officials can tell us we have to take someone else's sewage."

Kelly also objected strongly to the fee assessed, pointed out that Gastonia charges $1.13 per 1,000 gallons treated and declared the 55 cents fee quoted in the contract is "too low." However, both Commissioner Norman King and

City Attorney George Thomasson pointed out the contract allows the City of Kings Mountain to increase the fee if the actual cost of treating the waste should increase. Kimbrell also said the standard current fee for sewage customers outside the city is 55 cents.

City Commissioner Humes Houston suggested the board approve the document "as to form and contract" to allow negotiations. City Attorney George Thomasson agreed and said he suspected that the Town of Grover would have suggestions and possibly some alternations to make to the contract.

Commissioners voted unanimously to offer the sewer contract to Grover.

According to federal agencies, these compounds may cause serious health hazards, including the possible formation of cancer causing carcinogens. Our new home filter, Filtrum, removes more than 90% of the most virulent chemicals with filtration through granular activated carbon. It's simple. Fits under the sink. Attaches to the cold water line to deliver clean water through a separate tap. Stop wondering how safe your water is. Act now.

While industry and the EPA debate the issues, you and your family are playing Russian Roulette with every glass of water you drink. NOW the SOLUTION to the problem is WPS-1 Water Purification System is a three stage, highly compacted carbon filtering system with orifices less than one half micron in diameter.
