Recipe Could Cause Botulism

"It's a recipe for botulism," Dr. Nadine Tope says of a recipe published in several North Carolina newspapers recently. "A millionth of a gram of botulism is lethal."

The recipe entitled "Easy Canned Green Beans" does not call for processing. There is no way to safely can beans without processing them in a pressure canner.

"It is not just dangerous, it is extremely dangerous," says Dr. Tope, extension specialist-in-charge, foods and nutrition, North Carolina State University.

The recipe calls for boiling six quarts of green beans in water, vinegar, sugar and salt. The hot mixture is then poured into jars and sealed.

"If you have put up green beans following this unsafe method, you should carefully destroy those beans. Without opening the jars, pressure process them and throw them away," Dr. Tope says.

For safe directions for canning green beans or any other fruits and vegetables, contact your county agricultural extension office.
