Zoning Change Approved

to install a double wall, fiberglass underground 500-gallon storage tank to receive spent oils from the plant, and disposal will be by commercial scavenger, according to the minutes of a June 26 meeting with city officials.

"We have made it our policy to insure that we have public utilities to avoid this," Kost said. "We're very concerned with pollution and don't want to be involved with hazardous waste cleanup."

City resident, Mrs.

Haywood Lynch, suggested that the stream be re-routed to avoid any disruption of the wildlife and trout spawning waters, but Kost said he felt that would be impossible because of the slope of the land. Mayor Moss said the city had no authority to change the flow of the stream because it is outside the city limits. He said the city has the authority to rezone the property and provide utilities because the area is in the city's "one-mile perimeter." He said the N.C. Department of Natural Resources has jurisdiction over environmental matters.

"I have a problem when you say you can rezone but have no jurisdiction over the land," Stone told Moss.

Moss said he believes the "Department of Resources does a good job of management" and that there would be no environmental problems. "Municipalities have not generally taken on these responsibilities, nor do we have the authority to do so," he said.

Mrs. Farmer asked whether the rezoning action would later result in Canterbury Road residents having to "hook up" to city water and sewer, and how the zoning change would effect the value of her property. Mayor Moss said any extension of water and sewer lines to Canterbury Road residents would not be mandated and that he felt the new facility would increase the value of property in the area.

Alan Stout questioned whether the plant is the first of many proposed businesses in the Kings Mountain Corporate Center dream of Mayor Moss, and, if so, would the plant be required to follow the very stringent guidelines drawn up for that center.

Moss insisted the plant is not a part of the corporate center but after the mayor, Kost, Stout and Stone looked at a map of the proposed area, Stout said he believed it to be a part of the center.

"In most cases, when we deal with people, we look at who we're dealing with," said Moss. "AMPs is one of the finest corporations in America. We feel fortunate to have them locating this close to Kings Mountain and have total confidence they'll do a very quality job and make us proud of them."

"I'm not saying you're right or wrong," Stout told the mayor. "If you have a long range plan, will you go by these (Corporate Center) guidelines?" he asked Kost.

"I'm not familiar with the guidelines," he replied, "but if they're reasonable, we'll be within them. Our construction costs are going to be $100 per square foot, which is a nice building. With over 120 buildings in the United States, the last thing we want to do is create problems for our neighbors."
