By AMY AUSTIN

The Junior class received their long awaited class rings last Tuesday. Many different styles were chosen, but all of them symbolize their devotion to Kings Mountain Senior High School.

The Juniors also had a successful magazine sale. By selling $14,311 worth of subscriptions, they raised $5,724 for the Junior/Senior Prom and their Senior class gift. Top salesman was Greg Conner. He chose a remote control robot and a jambox as his prizes.

Every Junior who sold at least three subscriptions before the first turn-in day was invited to a banana split party Monday after school.

The Junior Varsity football team will play Shelby tonight at the home of the Lions. Game time is 7:30. Go Mounties!

The volleyball team played a match on September 9th at the Kings Mountain gym. They played South Point and Chase. Kings Mountain won two straight over South Point but had to play three against Chase before walking away with another victory.

The girls tennis team defeated Cherryville and North Gaston last week. North Gaston was the team's first conference win. They face Burns today at the KM courts.

The cross-country team had their first meet last Thursday. The team finished second overall. For the boys, Todd Fleming was first and Michael Woods second. Asa Nord placed first for the girls with Jennifer Bradley and Heather Bradshaw tied for second.

The undefeated Mountaineers face the Shelby Lions tomorrow night at John Gamble Stadium. A record breaking crowd is expected. Be there!!

The student body is busy preparing for tomorrow's game. The Pep Club has had extra meetings to organize everyone's school spirit. There will be a pep rally tomorrow afternoon led by the KMSHS Cheerleaders and pep band.

Mr. Wilson and the student body encourage everyone to participate in singing the Alma Mater during the pre-game activities. The words by Helen Cornwell Logan and Lucille Cansler Falls:

"Dear ole KM High we love the,
Loud and long our praises ring,
Joining in with all our voices,
Ever more thy name to sing.
In our work or play or studies,
We will try our best to do.
For we love and honor,
Dear ole KM High,
To the we'll ever be true."

Two Cooks Won't Spoil Broth In This Kitchen

More men are turning up in the kitchen these days to lend their spouses a helping hand—and it's causing problems.

Partly it's the "food fad" that's drawing men to the kitchen but more often it's the desire—the need, even—to assist their working wives with mealtime preparations.

Unfortunately, despite the male's best intentions, most kitchens aren't made for two people. Put a husband and wife together in the average kitchen and it won't be long before they realize, like the hero and the villain in a western movie, that "this place ain't big enough for the both of us."

Actually, it isn't so much a matter of size; it's more the arrangement or layout of present kitchens. They're based on the concept of the triangle: easy access to refrigerator, sink and range.

Nothing wrong with that except most kitchens have only one triangle. Putting two persons into a work space for one can result in collisions, crossed purposes and chaos!

But it doesn't have to be that way, and noted kitchen designer Ellen Cheever, head of the Maytag company's Kitchen Idea Center, proves it in a recent remodeling of an old "one-person kitchen." The results are seen in the October 1985 issue of Popular Science magazine (at newstands Sept. 10).

Very little was done in the way of structural changes. The key to the remodeling was the installation of new counters, appliances and Wood-Mode cabinets in a wraparound arrangement and the addition of an easy-to-build island unit in the middle of the room.

Now, thanks to the wraparound layout and central island, no work station is more than a step or two away, and neither person bumps into the other. Both have their own triangle.

She commands the principal refrigerator, range and sink at the left side of the room. At the other side, he has his own refrigerator (a small one) in a newly added bar, a sink in the island unit and a microwave.

Another feature of interest is the two-tone installation of Armstrong no-wax floor tiles, which frame the island unit. The island sits on a sea of beige tiles, bordered by blue-gray ones, which in turn are surrounded by beige ones. The no-wax tiles look like glazed ceramic but they're actually vinyl—easier to install, easier to clean and easier on the feet.

The color scheme takes its cue from the flooring. The cabinets and appliances are almond; the countertops, navy blue. The wallpaper is a discreet almond-and-navy windowpane check.

Of course, preparing week-day meals and cleaning up are never going to top a working couple's list of fun things to do. But in a kitchen like this, they're much less of a chore than they'd otherwise be.

IDEAL KITCHEN FOR WORKING COUPLE—When men assist with meal preparations, they can be more a hindrance than a help unless, as here, the kitchen has been remodeled to accommodate an assistant cook. Specially designed for a working couple, the kitchen is featured in the October issue of Popular Science magazine.
