

BUDDY MORROW....Conducts Orchestra

Tommy Dorsey Orchestra Coming To Gastonia

There is something unique about the Tommy Dorsey Orchestra which is conducted by Buddy Morrow and will be appearing in the Gastonia community in concert, at Hunter Huss High School Auditorium on Thursday, October 3, at 8 p.m.

It's leader, Buddy Morrow, is a veteran of the "Big Band" era and himself a member of the original Dorsey brigade. However, people often expect to see the orchestra comprised of men the same vintage as those in the original band and are surprised at the number of younger members on board.

Most of these younger musicians are graduates of the numerous fine music schools throughout the country and, strange as it may seem to some fans of the 1940's, are often older than were some of the original Dorsey-ites—

Buddy was still in his teens

when he was with Tommy Dorsey!

The "Sentimental Gentleman of Swing" has able representation in the extraordinary trombone playing of Morrow.

Coupled with these solos, the Dorsey "sound" stresses the ensemble feel featuring the brass and reed sections, and this fine blend of instruments brings to life once more such great, undying original Tommy Dorsey arrangements as "Marie", "Song of India", "Opus No. 1", "I'll Never Smile Again", and many more.

Once this band starts to blow, there's no doubt that the drive and spirit behind the musicianship of the original Tommy Dorsey Orchestra reign once more.

Good music knows no generation gap in its ability to swing, and swing it does under the direction of Morrow.
