Beware of Growing Con Games

Consumer alert: A warning is being issued to all consumers who own earth stations for TV reception, or are considering installing one in the near future. You can save yourself time and aggravation by being wary of con men in the earth station industry.

Industry experts report many cable programmers are going to be scrambling their signals in the future and you'll have to pay for TV programming that you thought you'd get for free. Many disreputable earth station salesman, it seems, tell customers they can get everything they were once getting on cable television for "free" once they buy the earth station terminal. They tell their customers scrambling will never really happen, or that Congress will prohibit it, or that they will be able to buy a cheap little "black box" to descramble the signals and continue to get the programming for "free."

Installing a big back yard dish for "free" TV reception may not be as inexpensive as many think.

All such claims are false. The fact is, scrambling of satellite signals is shortly going to be a reality. You'll still be able to get some of the TV signals you want — but you'll have to pay for them. A reputable earth station salesperson will tell you that. By the way, it is illegal to intercept ABC, NBC and CBS now. When they scramble, it is unlikely home terminal owners will be able to buy those satellite signals.
