HOW MUCH?
By RUBY M. ALEXANDER

Setting an asking price for your home is one of the most vital steps to selling it. And, it's one of the trickiest parts of the selling process. Too little, and you lose potential return on your real estate investment. Too high a price, and you could be in worse trouble.

Put quite simply, a house that's priced too high won't sell, and it will scare away those potential buyers who are its logical market. By the time you drop the price to a more realistic level, as you'll have to, you've lost the initial impetus of a fresh-on-the-market property.

A professional real estate agent doesn't have to pluck a selling price out of thin air. Careful consideration of comparable properties that have sold recently, balanced by current mortgage rates, help set the price. An expert can set a price right on the button.

It's smart to sell your house at the best possible price. Smart sellers list with the experts at Alexander Realty.
