From Page 1-A

The Kings Mountain Rescue Squad asked the county to take over the ambulance and rescue service in Kings Mountain in November 1985 because of lack of personnel and insufficient number of EMT's. Since November 1985, the Kings Mountain Squad had served as a back up only for Emergency Medical Services and rescue services only, the EMS operating out of Kings Mountain Hospital.

The petition requests the board of commissioners allow the KM Squad to be dispatched for "transports" as a "primary responder" for ambulance service during a 24 hours period of coverage in Kings Mountain from Saturday afternoon at 5 p.m. until Sunday afternoon at 5 p.m.

Captain Byers said that when the KM Squad gave up the ambulance and rescue service the KM Squad numbered only eight EMT's. "We're in a position now to serve the Kings Mountain area and we want to do that," he said.

EMERGENCY MEDICAL SERVICES WEEK

The week of September 21-28 has been designated National Emergency Medical Services Week by the American College of Emergency Physicians in order to increase public awareness of this vital aspect of medical care. Governor Martin has decreed the week as Emergency Medical Services Week for the State of North Carolina as well.

Emergency Medical Services Week is designated to recognize those men, women, and institutions that dedicate themselves to specialize in providing treatment for emergency conditions in any specialty, as well as those routine medical problems that end up in Emergency Rooms. From severe problems like a child with sniffles or a sore throat; these professionals are trained to handle them all. It's an emotionally trying job, too, dealing with death and bad diseases; but the Emergency Room is the place where this is all handled 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 365 days a year.

Kings Mountain is fortunate to have a well equipped and staffed Emergency Room of its own at Kings Mountain Hospital. They are prepared to handle almost any emergency at any time. The essence of emergency medicine is to at least stabilize a critical patient so that definitive care can be delivered where appropriate. To do this, there is always a physician in the Emergency Room stationed there for 24 hour shifts, always ready to handle an emergency.

What is a medical emergency? Some situations are obvious emergencies such as a gunshot wound or a heart attack but the true answer is whatever a patient feels may be an emergency. If a person has a family physician (as all people should), a call to their doctor or the person on call for their group of physicians can direct the patient when and where to seek medical help. Some problems are best handled by a doctor they can continue to follow up with in an office setting. The Emergency Room at Kings Mountain Hospital also welcomes calls at 739-3601, if a person has questions about whether they should see a doctor immediately.

In conjunction with Emergency Medical Services Week, Cleveland County Emergency Medical Services will be showing off their new ambulance and equipment at Cleveland Mall Thursday through Sunday, September 25-28. Tours of the Kings Mountain Hospital Emergency Room and the hospital can always be set up by calling Teenia Henderson at 739-3601. The hospital will be sponsoring a Health Fair Saturday, October 25, and this will be another time that the public can tour the hospital or the Emergency Room in particular. Details on the Health Fair will be forthcoming in the Herald soon, so watch for that information.
