County Begins Winter Safety Awareness Program

Cleveland County has begun a community-wide winter safety awareness program to alert local residents to the dangers of harsh winter weather.

This winter awareness campaign is being launched in coordination with a national campaign by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA), in partnership with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA).

"We urge you to educate yourself and the members of your household on how to get through rough winter weather. Be prepared for isolation in your home, treacherous driving conditions. Beware of exposure to freezing temperatures, heart attacks from overexertion, fires from overheated stoves and furnaces, and other winter emergencies. Check your supply of food, critical medicines, and battery-powered equipment before the cold weather arrives," said Director of Emergency Services Abbey Leford.

For more information on how you can prepare for this winter, contact the Cleveland County Emergency Services office.

Cleveland County commissioners today signed a proclamation declaring January 3-9, 1988, Winter Preparedness Week in Cleveland County.

The Proclamation supports the teamwork of public and private sector organizations working together to educate the residents of Cleveland County on the perils of winter. It urges citizen participation and calls for the people of Cleveland County to take reasonable precautions to reduce injuries, illness, deaths, and property damage caused by severe winter weather.

"The potential for human suffering and damage in this area is real. We are determined to reduce that potential through the joint efforts of government and our citizens," said Chairman, L.E. Hinnant.
