Chief's VCR Recovered

Police Chief Warren Goforth, himself the victim of a breaking and entering last week, etched his driver's license number on the VCR and the stolen camera equipment.

Shelby Sgt. Roy Spurling recovered the VCR Wednesday morning at an apartment in Holly Oak in Shelby where the resident said a neighbor had brought it to her.

Chief Goforth said he got his VCR back because of the identifying number which located the owner after investigating officers used the PIN system and identified the Chief as being the owner of the stolen property.

Chief Goforth wants other residents to join local police in a campaign to mark all items of value with an etching device which police will loan you or if you are a senior citizen of disabled the local police will set up an appointment for a time they can come to your home and mark your belongings for you with your driver's license number. It's free to the public.

Chief Goforth says the etching of the ID number is placed in an inconspicuous place on a VCR, camera, typewriter, or anything you value. "It may not solve the crime but it locates the property owner", said the chief.

PTL Center May Close

Without financial support from the community, People That Love Center on North Piedmont Avenue will soon be closing its doors.

Wanda and Harry Kyle, who opened the Love Center here and have paid the $200 per month rent on the building themselves several times, say they can no longer operate the Center without financial support from others than volunteers who keep the building open and distribute clothes and other items to the area needy.

"No donation is too small", says Kyle.
