Citizens Warned Of Scams

squads. Of course the businesses want to help their local units and are almost always willing to respond to the telephone solicitation.

The problem is, the callers use a slick sales pitch full of promises, leading the businesses to believe part of the money will be a direct contribution to the squad. You and I know that isn't always true. It's almost impossible to catch these scammers, but with your help we can try. Public exposure through your local radio and television stations and newspapers is a very good way to begin a prevention campaign. When you get complaints, let us know about them. Keep in mind that we need to know the date of the solicitation, the name of the person who called and what they said to get the businesses to send money. (N.C. Attorney General, Consumer Protection, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602. 919-733-7741.)"

Whetstine Interim Rec Director

His responsibilities with the department include supervising grounds maintenance crews, office personnel, building custodians, and swimming pool personnel. He is also responsible for requisitioning needed supplies and processing work orders for any work that needs to be done. The director of recreation also keeps the mayor and city manager informed of what is going on in the department.

For Whetstine, the job has been challenging so far, he said. "Organizing, planning...working with the public - it's been an experience."

City Police Make Arrests, Report Acts Of Vandalism

Police charged Floyd Eugene Brown, of 208 Carpenter St., with possession of drug paraphernalia, felonious possession of marijuana, possession with intent to sell and possession of alcoholic beverages after complaints from citizens and a search warrant of his premises.

Preliminary Census Activity To Begin In KM Area

Preliminary field activities on the 1990 Census will begin this summer in North Carolina. Most counties in the state, with the exception of the coastal and mountainous counties, will be involved in this large scale field listing operation.

According to William F. Hill, Regional Director of the Charlotte office of the Census Bureau, this preliminary field listing is the first step in preparing a comprehensive list of mailing addresses in North Carolina. Approximately one thousand residents in the state will be hired to complete this address listing project.

The task involves listing the address of housing units in selected areas outside of larger cities. Each housing unit is listed on a master listing sheet and spotted on a corresponding map.

In 1989 the Census Bureau will go into the larger cities in the state and check addresses prepared by commercial vendors. In late 1989 the Census Bureau will go into the coastal and mountainous counties of the state and list addresses.

The goal of these listing operations is to obtain a complete list of addresses in the state. A census questionnaire will then be received by each of these addresses in March of 1990.

The Census Bureau's immediate task is to hire enumerators in the areas to prepare the address listings. All interested candidates should contact the county office of the North Carolina Employment Security Commission (Job Service), at Kings Mountain Community Center.
