SELLING YOUR HOUSE

RUBY ALEXANDER

"INVESTING" IN THE SALE

Your home is probably the largest single asset in your personal portfolio. It really matters how much you get when you sell. Would you be willing to "invest" some money in improving the property's sales appeal — if you could get back twice as much? Experience shows that a few thousand dollars put into fixing up the house may come back double in a higher sale price.

Fresh paint is the best investment of all. Choose a light color that goes with anybody's furniture. If the carpet's shabby, replace it. Take care of major and minor repairs; the roof, the plumbing, and the heating should be in working order.

Major renovations are not usually necessary, though a second bath and/or a modern kitchen will improve the salability of a home. However, you probably won't get as high a return on this kind of investment compared with cosmetic repairs. Our real estate pros can help you choose the most worthwhile improvements.
