Girl Scouts Help Needy

Service is synonymous with Girl Scouting. A Girl Scout promises "to help people at all times." The holiday season brings out the best in the helpful nature of Girl Scouts. Troops make favors and gifts for shut-ins and deliver them with songs and smiles. Needy families are adopted and food and gifts follow. These activities are an on going part of the Girl Scout program.

Sometimes these Girl Scout activities generate special program and projects. In Dallas, Linda Hoffman's senior troop planned and carried out a Giving Tree program at Holy Communion Lutheran Church. Troops decorated the tree with hand made ornaments. Gifts under the

Local Students Study Abroad

Paul Mauncy Neisler IV and Adrian Lin Bell of Kings Mountain are among 100 Wingate College students who are spending their holiday break with faculty leaders in the school's Winternational '88 program.

In a travel-study program that has been offered at Wingate since 1979, the students are traveling to England, Austria, France, Finland or the U.S.S.R.

Neisler is in Paris and the Loire Valley, France, studying contemporary France under the direction of Darlene Doak, instructor in the language arts.

Bell is in Vienna and Salzburg, Austria, continuing study of folk culture and the Austrian arts, under the direction of Dr. Edwin Bagley, associate professor of philosophy and religion.

tree were delivered to the Baptist Association. Diane Hoyle was in charge of the Giving Tree at the Cleveland Mall. The gifts collected there went to the Shelter Home.

In Cherryville the service unit, under the leadership of Jonnie Conner, and the Boy Scouts adopted a family with four boys and one girl. They have winterized the windows and provided a range. On Christmas Eve they will be delivering a bicycle, scooter and a basketball hoop.

Kathy Lawson coordinated the contribution for the Christian Ministries. Troops came by the First United Methodist Church in Lincolnton on Saturday, December 17 and left their canned and staple goods and toys. While over in Denver the Girl Scouts, under the direction of Debby Carpenter, sang a program of Christmas carols.

Shoppers at the Tri City Mall in Rutherford County had a chance to observe all age levels of Girl Scouts deliver their carefully assembled gifts to the Giving Tree. Proud parents and leaders beamed with pride as service unit manager, Mary Jane Dailey, called the roll of participating troops. PATH and Christmas Cheer were the community organizations receiving their gifts.

Lynn Ames' Junior Troop 19 delivered their gifts to the Belmont Community Organization. While in Stanley and Mt. Holly the gifts were received by the Community Relief Organizations. West Gastonia Girl Scouts worked by troops and gave through Christian Ministries and the Department of Social Services.

Pattie Guthrie directed the service activities in Bessemer City. Food, including a turkey, clothing and toys were delivered to three families. In Kings Mountain the school social worker handled the gifts collected by Barbara Ormand and Jane Talbert.

West Rutherford Girl Scouts assembled at the Courthouse Square for a candle light program under the leadership of Susan Kernbodde. The gifts brought there went to benefit Youth House.

So when we think of all the gifts received by children at Christmas we can take comfort from the fact that they give a lot too. Christmas is....Girl Scouts helping others.

Some people think nothing of making promises they have no intention of keeping. Or agreeing to deadlines they know they can't meet. But if we expect our company to be successful, and our jobs secure, we must stand behind our word. When we make a commitment, we put our reputation on the line. And every time we meet a deadline, we earn the confidence and trust of our customers.
