Youth Prepare To Lead Future Of Winn Dixie

By JIM HEFFNER

How many times have you heard someone say, "If I were the boss things would be different around here?" Six young people had the opportunity to live that fantasy on Saturday, April 22, as Winn Dixie held its first Youth Management Day.

The six, Marty Lockridge, Ernie Hamrick, Brian Webster, Chip Parker, Eric Willis and Stacy Goode, ran the local food market from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., performing all the functions of the Location Manager as well as the department heads necessary to manage an operation of that scope.

Regular location manager, J.V. Bolin, a 39-year veteran with Winn Dixie, enjoyed the exercise immensely. "It's fun," he said, "but it's also an opportunity to evaluate some of our employees. We rotate people to all departments in our store. Generally, an employee spends about 12 weeks in each department so by the time they have made the rounds, they're pretty well trained in every facet of managing a location."

Marty Lockridge and Ernie Hamrick split the 8 hour shift as Location Manager while the departments were managed by Brian Webster in the meat market, Chip Parker in produce, Eric Willis handled dairy and frozen foods and Stacy Goode acted as deli and bakery manager.

Goode is a distributive education student and acquired her job at Winn-Dixie as part of that program. The 18-year-old plans to attend Gaston College and study computer programming. She sees Youth Management Day as a "valuable learning experience."

Brian Webster, also eighteen, is already a student at Gaston College where he is enrolled in the pre-liberal arts program. "I think an activity like this is a good way to learn responsibility," he said.

"I want to use this time to learn to tell my boss what to do," said Chip Parker. Parker is a high school junior who has been with Winn-Dixie for eleven months. He is considering a career with the U.S. Postal Service. "Seriously," he said. "Today's experience will be fun, but I think we'll all learn something."

Eric Willis, another junior, is planning to enter the Air Force upon graduation. He's been with Winn-Dixie for a year and a half and he believes the entire temporary management team will have gained something from the special day.

Ernie Hamrick, a Kings Mountain High School senior enjoys the feeling of power. "I'm going to try to get as much out of it as I can" he said. "I want to learn to be a good Location Manager."

Marty Lockridge, the veteran of the crew having worked for Winn-Dixie for two years and four months, want to learn the ins and outs of being a Location manager. "I'll more than likely make this my career," he said. "One day I'll wear this manager's vest permanently." As a hedge, though, Marty plans to study criminal justice and police science in college.

The Youth Management Day participants were selected by a committee comprised of local department managers as well as J.V. Bolin. They are chosen because of management potential, desire and overall job skills. "They have all the necessary ingredients," said Bolin. "They perform well in their everyday jobs, they have ability and initiative, but most of all they like people and that's what it takes to be a manager at Winn-Dixie."

Bolin is quick to point out that his store is blessed with potential managers. "We could have staffed the store many times over," he said.

Youth Management Day is a unique idea and Winn-Dixie plans to make it an annual event. It's very likely that, at least in the case of Winn-Dixie, tomorrow's food store executives are bagging groceries today.

Bridesmaids Luncheon Honors Anne Ross Ballard

Anne Ross Ballard, whose wedding to Claude Haywood Clark II was an event of April 15, was honored on her wedding day at a 11 a.m. bridesmaids luncheon at Holiday Inn.

Miss Ballard's place was marked by a pink corsage which she pinned to the shoulder of her mauve linen party dress. She was also given a place setting in her silverware pattern from the hostesses.

Miss Ballard took the occasion to present her attendants the pearl earrings they wore in the wedding. Present as special guests were Mrs. Bud Ballard, mother of the bride-elect; Mrs. C. H. Clark, mother of the bridegroom-elect; Mrs. Emmett Ross, grandmother of the bride-elect; Mrs. Sammy Crawford and Mrs. Eddie Ross, aunts of the bride-elect. Fruit and chicken salad plates were served with dessert, hot rolls and iced tea to 14 guests.
