"We did not have busses for transportation for sports events but we were fortunate enough to have parents and school personnel use their cars to take us to games. I always managed to ride in Mr. Barnes' car as he always stopped to buy milkshakes after the game-win or lose. Mr. Barnes gave me the opportunity to work and grow in the educational field. No one could ask for a better teacher or better training than he offered me. He loved children and that rubbed off on me," she said.

Dr. Donald D. Jones was Mrs. Davis' second boss for 10 years. "Jones brought his own philosophy and style to Kings Mountain. The students were winners as he initiated new innovated programs. The community also profited during this time with new school construction."

Until her retirement Mrs. Davis worked with Supt. Bill Davis. "Davis, too, began new programs and opened avenues for children and more construction programs," she said.

For the last couple of years Davis has substituted in the schools. She said she is "aware of the new programs and positions that Dr. Bob McRae has initiated." Now under his guidance a big building program is underway. "No school system could ask for better Superintendents to administer the schools than these men," said Davis who said the school system has come a long way. When Davis went to work the system had 81 employees and a budget of less than $100,000. Now, there are over 500 employees and the budget is $13 million.

Wife of I. C. Davis, Mrs. Davis is past president of the National Association of Educational Office Personnel, N. C. Association of Educational Office Personnel, District II, NCAEOP and local NCAEOP. She was chairman of the NAEOP conference at UNC-G in 1971 and will chair the NAEOP conference in Winston Salem in 1991. She is president of NAEOP

Retired Professionals, editor of the newsletter of NAEOP retired professionals, and a member of the N. C. Retired Governmental Employees Association. She is a member of First Baptist Church and serves as assistant treasurer and WMU Director. She was a team member last year of the Southern Baptist Mission to Brazil and is returning to Brazil this summer. She is a Hospice volunteer, a member of the Kings Mountain Hospital Auxiliary and White Plains Shrinettes.

The Davises are parents of one daughter, Jean Davis Allred. They have two grandchildren, Tommy and Michelle Allred. They reside on York Road.
