

New Books At KM Library

New young adult books are on the shelves at Mauney Memorial Library.

Arrick, Fran. "Chernowitz!" (New American Library, 1983).

"Bobby could handle a bully-but anti-Semitism was something else...a frightening reminder that the spread of racial prejudice can happen anywhere."

Asher, Sandy. "Everything Is Not Enough" (Dell, 1989).

"Seventeen-year-old Michael has everything: loving parents, summer at the beach, a job waiting for him in his father's business. But Michael wants to make it on his own, to chart our hit own life...Told with warmth and a keen understanding of the choices people make."

Bridgers, Sue Ellen. "Permanent Connections" (Harper, 1988).

"Rob knows his parents are upset about his secretive, sullen behavior, his fooling around with drugs. But the pain inside him is crying out to be obliterated, buried in forgetfulness."

Cross, Gillian. "On The Edge" (Dell, 1987).

"Kidnapped! Tony wakes up in a strange place, held captive by a frightening man and woman who claim to be his parents. Actually, they are members of a terrorist group...Is there any chance for escape?"

Crutcher, Chris. "Running Loose" (Dell, 1986).

"A tough, funny, angry, beautiful morality tale...It's more than just a sport's story. It's a tightly plotted, compelling tale...compassionate, sensitive."

Crutcher, Chris. "Stotan!" (Dell, 1988).

"Underlying the humor and glib repartee is a serious, hard time, growing up story...it deals with responsibility, courage and heroism and ultimately about life itself."

Dana, Barbara. "Necessary Parties" (Bantam, 1987)

"Fifteen-year-old Chris Mills loves his parents, but hates the fact that they want to get a divorce. With the help of a part-time lawyer, Chris does the only thing he can to keep the family together. He sues his parents and changes their lives forever."

Doris, Michael. "A Yellow Raft In Blue Water" (Warner, 1988).

"Starting in the present and moving backward in time, this is the thrice-told tale of three women...15 year old part-blood Rayona, searching for a way to find herself, her American Indian mother, Christine, consumed by both tenderness and resentment toward the people she loves and the fierce and mysterious Ida, the mother and grandmother whose haunting secret, ancient betrayal and undying dream echo silently through the years, bonding and braiding together the tree strands of this shared past—and the future."

Fox, Paula. "The Moonlight Man" (Dell, 1988).

"Harry Ames, Catherine's father, calls one night, and she soon on her way to Nova Scotia, where Mr. Ames lives in a small house. When Catherine's parents divorce she was very young, and so she barely knows this man, her father...Harry Ames fills Catherine's days with his love and enthusiasm for poetry, nature, and travel as they share wild, sunlit times together near the sea. Then at night there is always the fear...Will Catherine ever understand her father? Can she ever begin to love the moonlight man?"

Garden, Nancy. "Annie On My Mind" (Farrar, Straus and Giroux, 1987).

"A compelling story of two real and intriguing young women. There have been many books for teenagers, fiction and nonfiction, that give lots of useful and accurate information about homosexuality; here's the one that tells what it feels like, and that have, finally, romance."

Hall, Lynn. "The Leaving" (Macmillan, 1988).

"A deceptively simple insight into a family...Each character, along with the Iowa farm setting, is rendered vividly immediate...Very moving."

Howe, Norma. "In With The Out Crowd" (Avon, 1988).

"Robin had always been part of the in crowd at school...But all of a sudden, everything changed...Suddenly she was out with the in crowd! From outside, a lot of things started looking different and one particular boy who had never been part of the in crowd started looking very interesting."

Kerr, M. E. "Night Kites" (Harper, 1987).

"Meeting Nicki teaches Erick about not fitting in. Then Erick learns that Pete, his seemingly perfect big brother, doesn't fit in either. Nicki and Pete aren't afraid to be different, aren't afraid to love-But the price they pay is high. Erick longs for that freedom but is caught between his longing and the safe, secure world of his family."

Klass, Sheila Solomon. "Page Four" (Bantam, 1988).

"David Smith feels close to both his parents, does well in school, enjoys playing on the basketball team with his friends, and is headed straight for a top college. Then a bomb shell drops. His dad is moving to Alaska to start a new life with a young woman...Using page four of his college application for David tells the story of what happened during that year—and how, eventually, it changes his life forever."

LeVert, John. "The Flight Of The Cassowary" (Bantam, 1988).

"As he enters his junior year in high school, Paul faces the usual problems of trying to deal with his parents, understanding girls, and making a success of himself on the football field. But unlike other boys of 16, Paul becomes absorbed in the relationship between humans and animal behavior...a delicate balance between the mundane and the fantastic."

Levy, Marilyn. "Touching" (Ballantine, 1988).

"Eve's father is an alcoholic—and it's her problem as much as his...A real life story of a real life problem—and the courageous teenage girl who has to face it head on."

NEW MEMBER - Jerry DePew, center, is welcomed as a new member of the Kings Mountain Kiwanis Club by vice president David Neisler, left, and president Billy King. DePew is employed by Siemens Medical Systems. He and his wife, Ellie, have two sons, Rob, 17, and Jim, 12.

Funds To Be Raised

The Kings Mountain District Schools' Educational Foundation plans to begin its public awareness and fund raising campaign at a reception and banquet on Monday, August 28. George Shinn, owner of the Charlotte Hornets, will deliver the address at the banquet and will be the guest of honor at a 6 p.m., reception at Kings Mountain Country Club. The banquet will be held at the Kings Mountain Senior High School cafeteria at 7:30 p.m.

The Foundation is a non-profit organization which seeks to provide opportunities for teachers and students which go beyond the scope of the regular school program. Initial offerings of the Foundation will include student scholarships and grants to teachers for special projects. The Foundation, which had been a goal of the school system for several years, became a reality in 1988 thanks to a gift from the family of the late Carl F. Mauney.

Tickets will be available for the entire evening, which includes the reception and banquet, or for the banquet alone. The tickets, which are a tax deductible contribution to the Foundation, are $50 for the reception and banquet and $15 for the banquet itself. Tickets will be available at all schools and the central office of the school system and at Kings Mountain financial institutions and area businesses.
