The McKeithens

What would this world be without music? If we never had a song to sing? Music fills our hearts with love and sunshine. Dixie McKeithen says, "I can't imagine life without a song to sing."

"A World Without Music" was written by Dixie McKeithen in 1985. The McKeithens have centered their lives around God, country, family, ministry and music. You just cannot imagine them without a song to sing because that is their ministry.

Over 20 years ago in Bastrop, La., two couples, Joe and LaBreeska Hemphill, and their nephew, Tim McKeithen and his wife Dixie, came together to form the popular musical group "The Hemphills." After many years traveling with the family, Tim and Dixie began their own ministry.

Music has always been important to the McKeithens. Tim's dad was a member of the McKeithen Brothers who sang throughout the south in the 1930's and '40s. Growing up the son of a minister, he was exposed to many singing schools taught by his father. Whether singing, playing his guitar or being the spokesman for the group, a genuine, sincere love for the Lord shines through.

A God-given musical talent was instilled in Dixie at an early age. She began her musical career at age eight by playing the piano for her church. She later attended a Christian college and met Tim.

Gospel Music
BY BETTY GOODSON

Dixie is the songwriter of the family, and her husband is her "best critic and helper."

Their daughter, Angelina Ruth, is the youngest member, having been on the road with her parents since she was three years old. She plays rhythm guitar, drums, bass, keyboards and has been thrilling audiences across the country with her harmonica. She is emerging as a lead vocalist and a promising songwriter.

Another family member, Bonnie Brown, came from Texas to join the McKeithens. She is office manager and tour coordinator. She also joins the group on the road, lending her musical and vocal talent.

Ron Osborn is a multi-talented young man from South Carolina. He lends his vocal ability as well as musical skills on the bass, keyboards and trumpet.

In recent years, the group has added a full-time band and travels almost 70,000 miles a year. Their song, "Something Better Than Gold" brought them national atten-
