Houlditch Attends Cancer Society Celebration

Mrs. June Houlditch, chairperson of the Cleveland Unit's "Reach To Recovery" program recently attended the American Cancer Society's 20th anniversary celebration for its "Reach To Recovery" program at the Hyatt Regency in Atlanta - October 5-7. Reach To Recovery, a rehabilitation program for women who have had breast cancer, has been helping women meet the physical and emotional needs related to breast cancer surgery for twenty years.

Houlditch said of the conference, "It was fantastic. Each of our 50 states was represented, plus 26 foreign countries, with an attendance of almost 400 women. I was overwhelmed by the enthusiasm of these volunteers and by the scope of this program worldwide. It was a most informative meeting - Just Great!"

During the three-day celebration, Reach To Recovery volunteers were recognized for diligent service to the program, and presentations were made on the past, current and future status of the Reach To Recovery program. Workshops discussed issues affecting the International Reach To Recovery program and the Modern Management of Breast Cancer.

The Reach to Recovery program was actually created in 1952 through the efforts of Terese Lasser, a mastectomy patient. At the time, mastectomy patients were discouraged from discussing their operations with other patients. Lasser helped other women by doing just that.

In 1969, the American Cancer Society adopted the "Reach To Recovery" program and began its current twenty-year history of helping women nationwide.

Workers' Compensation Benefits Offered To Brown Lung Victims

Legal Consultation Now Available Free

Cotton textile workers in North Carolina who suffer from brown lung disease are eligible for cash payments through N. C. Workers' Compensation.

Even people who retired years ago may be able to receive benefits.

Textile employees who have worked with cotton or blends in the opening, picking, carding, spinning, yarn preparation, winding or weaving areas of cotton mills can get brown lung. Symptoms are shortness of breath, a persistent cough, and tightness in the chest.

Paul Michaels, John Alan Jones and Greg Martin are members of a law firm which has helped North Carolina brown lung victims since 1975

To receive benefits, you must file a claim. Paul Michaels, John Alan Jones and Greg Martin are North Carolina lawyers in a firm which has helped cotton textile employees and their families since 1975. They have a toll free telephone to offer free consultations, and they do not charge attorneys fees unless they win or settle your case.
