Consider Real Estate Career

If you are a college-bound high school junior or senior, you've probably already started visiting colleges and pondering the career choices open to you. The decision you make now will have a major impact upon your future. "For energetic, imaginative and bright young individual, real estate is one area where fortunes still can be made, and at the same time, good done for the community," says Jerry King, president of the Kings Mountain Board of Realtors. Seldom does one have the opportunity in a vacation to combine private gain with public beneficence," he continued. The members of the Kings Mountain Board of Realtors would like to offer the following information on the field of real estate in the 1990's.

To many young people, real estate is simply somebody selling a house. That may be what the average consumer sees due to the extensive advertising necessary to bring homebuyers and sellers together, but real estate is much more. The real estate industry is a huge business encompassing a variety of specialty services.

Land development, for instance, is one of the most active and profitable branches of the industry. Executive ability is a pre-requisite for anyone hoping to turn a piece of raw land into a marketable subdivision of new homes, a shopping mall or an industrial park. To select a site, analyze costs, secure financing, install improvements, oversee construction and market the finished product, requires a multitude of decisions. To make them, a developer must have extensive knowledge and expert advice.

The field of financing is a large and complex component of the real estate industry. Whether specializing in financing, as in the case of a mortgage banker, or simply offering prospective property owners the best information possible, real estate entrepreneurs must understand available loans their variable interest rates and loan periods.

Appraisal is another highly specialized field offering a rewarding future for interested young people. Appraisers must have thorough knowledge of the principles underlying land use, urban growth, financing, construction, architecture, taxation and zoning. Years ago, appraisers learned their jobs by doing. Today, college courses are offered in appraisal work so that a student now has accurate knowledge of the field upon graduation and is ready to start immediately.

Real estate counseling is a growing field due to the increasing complexity of the real estate industry. The counselor advises clients whether land will best be used for a shopping mall, a resort development or an industrial park.

Counselors are employed by buyers, sellers, developers, investors--any potential participant in a real estate transaction.

There are additional areas of real estate specialties open to young people entering the business world, each with professional support. For instance, the National Association of Realtors, the nation's largest trade association, has nine affiliated institutes, societies and councils, each focusing on a different aspect of real estate.

Men and women skilled in these areas have a tremendous opportunity to be of service to the community as well as to advance themselves financially. Members of the Kings Mountain Board of Realtors are frequently called upon to observe in important positions on civic boards, planning commissions and task forces which have a lasting impact on community development.

With large cities expanding their suburban seams and new industries dotting the countryside, the need for trained people in the real estate field is continuous. "I can think of no other profession, which allows young people to carve out a more satisfying career than in real estate," says King. Invest in your future--talk to your high school guidance counselor or consult academic college catalogs for information about a career in real estate.

Shower Honors Sharon Chaney

A drop-in stork shower Sunday at the home Mrs. John Grant honored Mrs. Sharon Moore Chaney. Mrs. Kay Woody and Mrs. Grant hosted the event.

After presenting gifts to Mrs. Chaney, the guests were invited to help themselves to a variety of refreshments. The table was decorated with the color theme of aqua and white, which are the colors of the nursery. The center piece, which was hand painted by Mrs. Grant, was a teddy bear riding on the back of a rocking horse. On either side of the center piece were brass bugles accented with bows which symbolized the heralding in of the new arrival.

Mrs. Chaney was presented a corsage, made of silver baby spoon accented with pink and blue ribbons and baby's breath, by Mrs. Grant. Many friends and family members attended and shared in the joy of the new arrival, which is due around January 1.
