Allison Durham Young Artist On The Way To Top

Allison Durham is a young vocalist with a fantastic voice who has emerged on the gospel music

Allison is from a small town in Kentucky, where she was exposed to gospel music by singing in the choir at church and at school. She participated in every talent show and every contest that she could. However, her big boost came when she requested to sing during intermission at a Squire Parsons con-

Squire was so impressed with what he heard that he requested that Allison put together a demo tape. The tape was sent to Maurice Templeton of Templeton Christian tours, and then on to Eldridge Fox, who owns The Kingsmen Quartet and The Hear Hear Recording Recording Company and recently secured an exclusive booking agreement with Artist Direction Agency, of which Faye Shedd is president. Faye said, "Allison is a bright, fresh new talent which I believe will bring a new dimension to both the southern gospel and inspirational markets.'

Jerry Bedsole of WKMT in Kings Mountain says he has received Allison's new compact disc and has been playing some of the songs on his gospel music program. He says, "Allison is a great talent with quite a voice. I think she will be around in gospel music for a long time."

A recent Alaskan tour found many gospel music veterans on board. Allison was featured with such artists as The Cathedrals and

Allison then joined Homeland The Gaither Trio. Bill Gaither happened to be in the audience at one of Allison's performances. After hearing her, he jumped from his seat in the first row to express his excitement over this rising young artist. He remarked, "We have here a bright, young talent whose gift of singing and communication are a wonderful addition to gospel music. This kind of warm and beautiful spirit is rare indeed." He then asked the audience to join him in a prayer of encouragement for Allison as she embarks on what is sure to be a most successful career.

Several of gospel music's favorite groups will be in the area soon. On Sat., Dec. 9, The Singing Cookes will be in concert at Chestnut Ridge Baptist Church in Kings Mountain. On Thurs., Dec. 14, The Primitive Quartet of
