Foursquare Breaks Ground For Multi-Purpose Building

Kings Mountain Foursquare Gospel Church broke ground Sunday to begin the building of their new multi-purpose facility expected to be completed by mid-summer.

The cost of the new facility will be in excess of $200,000. The building will be approximately 5,600 square feet in size and house a new kitchen facility, new bathrooms equipped with showers, several Sunday School classrooms, a storage room and a two-thirds size gymnasium. The gymnasium will also be used as a fellowship hall and main assembly area for special services.

Design for the new facility was done by architect Lyle E. Smith of Shelby. Jack Kiser of Bessemer City will do the construction. The heating and air conditioning system will be installed by David Butler of Kings Mountain. Both Kiser and Butler were engaged to build the present facility and the congregation was pleased with their previous work, said the pastor.

Members of the Church Physical and Financial Council are Robert Jones, Robert (Bob) Coley, Lewis Barrett, Richard (Carveth) Wells, Jerry Hudson and Richard Harrison.

Pastor Stalcup gives high praises for the congregation and support which the entire church has given to make this project possible. When asked how so much could be done by so few, he replies, "The people have a mind to work for the glory of God."

Foursquare Burns Note

Foursquare Gospel Church burned the note Sunday which signified the congregation had "paid in full" the indebtedness on the church building.

The new church facilities were built and dedicated in October 1982. In November 1989, the note for the previous facilities was paid in full.

"For a small congregation, the church is to be commended for this accomplishment," said Rev. Oscar Stalcup Jr., pastor.

Rev. Oscar Stalcup Jr., his wife, Linda, and their two sons, Greg and Todd, came to pastor the Kings Mountain Foursquare Gospel Church the first week of March 1981. Their oldest son, Greg, is now married to Wendy Green of the church, and they both work with little children in the church nursery. Their youngest son, Todd, plays the drums during church services. Todd is an honor student at Gaston College. Both sons are employed at Cinderella Knit of Kings Mountain.

The Stalcup's were honored at their church this past Sunday as they begin their 10th year at Kings
