KM Little Theatre To Present 'Miracle Worker' May 3-6

Kings Mountain Little Theatre has entered the home stretch of rehearsals for the upcoming production of William Gibson's "The Miracle Worker" which will be presented May 3-6 at Park Grace Auditorium.

"This is one of the most exciting and absorbingly interesting plays that I have ever attempted to direct. Our high hopes are that this play will maintain the unbroken string of successes it has enjoyed everywhere it has played," said Jane Copenhaver.

The play recounts the courage and determination of a teacher to reach a student whom others have been unable to touch.

"The members of Helen Keller's family have been understandingly portrayed by Gibson. He seems to say that the families of handicapped people have a special responsibility and challenge, sensitive to family members' frustrations; the father, Captain Keller, who can afford to find medical help, only to have to face the fact that medicine cannot help in this instance; the young second wife, whose first child this is and she is incapable of helping her; the older brother who must deal with the presence of a young stepmother and how this child is little more than an animal. None of the family received the world-wide acclaim and fame that Helen Keller achieved, which she richly deserved. We are reminded in watching this presentation of the quiet support that comes to many of from those people who are supportive and loving in the face of great obstacles," said Copenhaver. "Had her mother, played by Laura Beth Moss, not been determined to reclaim her daughter's life, had her father, played by David Jones, not been willing to hire the tutor, had the older brother, played by Jeff Grigg, not been courageous enough to defy his father when it was necessary, this story of triumph over tragedy would never have taken place," Copenhaver said.

Kings Mountain Little Theatre is funded in part by a Grassroots Grant
