An eerie curtain of grey fog lingers ghostlike at the base of the mountains and hovers over the hushed valley below. Yet, the early morning sky is tinted with heather hues of delicate pink and lavender, as if airbrushed by an unseen artist.

The scene is almost hypnotizing, but suddenly the trance is broken as a brilliant color display takes shape behind the slate blue mountains.

Neon shades of bright pink, the fuschia, followed by yellow gold and finally fiery red and orange wake up the sleepy sky. The sun slowly rises with its menagerie of colors.

God has given us a new day, heralded by all of drama and excitement of the sunrise, setting the stage for a new beginning. He gives us this gift each day of our lives. We can depend on the sunrise.

We can depend on God. Worship Him this week and thank Him for new beginnings.
