FACTS & FIGURES

The next time you're dining with friends and open up a bottle of wine, you may not realize it, but you're not only adding a celebratory touch to your meal, you're helping the economy, too. Here are some surprising facts about the wine industry you may want to drink in:

In 1987, the most recent year figures are available, the wine industry provided 250,000 jobs. If you consider all the other industries affected by the wine industry, add another 280,000 to that figure. Altogether, the wine industry directly and indirectly created over 530,000 jobs. These jobs provided workers with over $8 billion in wages.

Retail sales of wine exceeded $12 billion in 1987. This figure, however, tells only part of the story. According to a study produced for the National Wine Coalition, the wine industry increased the nation's economic output by $32 billion that year. From winemakers to wholesalers to retailers, the wine industry also pays billions of dollars in taxes to state, local and federal governments.

An informative report about wine as well as the industry's economic contribution to the economy is available free by writing to: National Wine Coalition, Dept. NAPS, 1825 I Street, N.W. Washington, D.C. 20006.

Cantaloupe, honeydew, casaba, Persian and Odessa are all varieties of the muskmelon. Their differences are the result of cultivation in different regions of the world.
