KM banks among 98 in group

First Carolina Federal Savings Bank and Home Federal Savings Bank, both of Kings Mountain, are among 98 that have joined the Community Investment Corporation of North Carolina (CICNC), making it the nation's largest statewide lending consortium.

In addition, the corporation announced that it is now accepting applications for permanent long-term financing for low/moderate multi-family housing projects.

The lending corporation, incorporated in December 1990, was created by the North Carolina Alliance of Community Financial Institutions in response to the need for affordable housing throughout the state.

CICNC will provide permanent long-term financing for low/moderate income housing projects (5 or more rental units), technical assistance to affordable housing project sponsors, partnerships with government entities in achieving maximum leverage of public and private funds to increase the supply of available affordable housing, loans for projects located in both urban and rural North Carolina, and loans for projects sponsored by both non-profit and for profit developers and community or housing development corporations.

In order to qualify for CICNC financing, at least 51 percent of the project units must be available to persons of low income.

The loans will be funded by the corporation's financial institution members utilizing the participation pooling process with subsequent origination and servicing performed by the CICNC staff.
