McDaniel sentenced in murder case

Former Kings Mountain resident Mark McDaniel, 37, was sentenced Thursday to life in prison after a jury found him guilty of murder in the January 26 shooting death of Richard Allen Phillips, 29, also formerly of Kings Mountain.
 McDaniel, sentenced on Friday to 25 years in prison on a cocaine trafficking charge, won't be eligible for parole for 20 years. The sentences will run concurrently.
 McDaniel's attorney said both sentences would automatically be appealed to the South Carolina Supreme Court.
 Judge James B. Stephens sentenced McDaniel to the mandatory life term in Cherokee County General Sessions Court. The jury deliberated 2 1/2 hours and returned the verdict late Thursday following a three-day trial.
 Stephens on Thursday denied public defender Don Lettner's motion for a new trial.

McDaniel was charged with killing Phillips January 26 at McDaniel's mobile home near Blacksburg. McDaniel claimed he fired in self-defense. He admitted shooting Phillips three times with a .380 caliber pistol in what he said was an effort to protect himself from a possible attack by Phillips and another man, Gary Martin Fowler Jr. of Route 2, Bessemer City. A fourth fatal shot to the back of Phillips' head was accidental, McDaniel claimed, when Phillips grabbed the gun barrel.

 Fowler, the state's key witness, testified that he hadn't known Phillips before the night of the shooting.
 Police found 8 ounces of cocaine buried near McDaniel's house during the investigation. McDaniel denied the cocaine belonged to him.
