Grover to light tree

GROVER - A community Christmas tree, the town's first, will be lighted Sunday at 5 p.m.

Max Rollins, chairman of the town's first Planning Board, has hand painted 700 pine cones to trim the 15 feet tall Spruce, which will be strung with 2,000 lights.

The red cones and the twinkling, white lights make a festive sight," said Bobbie Spivey, chairman of the holiday activities which also include a 3 p.m. parade on Saturday.

The tree has been decorated on Main Street at Laurel Avenue.

After the lights are turned on the tree, a program of Christmas caroling will be held.

The public is invited.

KAREN SHYTLES

Karen Shytles 13

Karen Renee Shytles celebrated her 13th birthday December 3. A dance was hosted by her mother, Cindy Shytles, and Bill Parker at Kings Mountain Depot.

Special guest and DJ was Karen's uncle, Jeff Bolin. Other special guests were her aunt Kelly Bolin; her uncle David Bolin, Rhonda Byrd, Ellen Bolin, Boda Jacobs, Benji Ragland, her cousin Lee Bolin and her sister, Leslie Shytles.

Party refreshments were served. Karen is the daughter of Cindy B. Shytles and Mark Shytles of Kings Mountain. She is the granddaughter of Ellen Bolin and Herman Bolin and Doug and Shirley Shytles, all of Kings Mountain.

nance defined so that police will know how to enforce it.

During his report, Queen said he received a threatening phone call at 4:30 a.m. Friday. He did not elaborate. "I'm not a quitter and I'll serve my term and not play favorites."

"Take me out of office next time if you don't think I'm doing a good job," he told the 40 people in the audience.

Shortly before his remarks, several women stood and thanked the mayor and board for their service. There was loud applause.

"I've got a lot of bad press recently," said Queen, who said he wanted to set the record straight after being accused of violating the town's animal ordinance by keeping cattle in a pasture near his residence. The only ordinance on the books, according to the attorney, is a vicious dog ordinance.

The new board reappointed Mayor Pro Tem Sandra Ellis, town clerk Lynn Davis and town attorney Mickey Corry and made little changes in commissioner appointments. Jack Herndon was reappointed to the Planning and Zoning Board and also as chairman of the cemetery committee.

The board also set a fee of $25 for anyone using the town hall, including the Grover Woman's Club, which has been using the facility free for their monthly meetings. After the meeting, several club members said they were disappointed by Council's action when the club raised money for town projects, including equipment for the police car. KJoe owner Kay Saltz offered her business as a free meeting place for the club.

Former Postmaster Fain Hambricht had advice for all.

"Enough is enough of this petty stuff. Give us all a Christmas present by making a New Year's resolution to love our neighbors and make Grover a better place to live."
