

Freon recycling course at CCC

A course dedicated to the recovery and recycling of freons will be offered at Cleveland Community College beginning August 17 and concluding August 31.

EPA Refrigerant Recovery/Recycling Certification teaches the rules and regulations governing the recycling of chlorofluorocarbons. According to Environmental Protection Agency mandates, anyone who works, services or repairs air conditioning or refrigeration equipment must be certified by November 14. There are four levels of certification that can be attained including Small Appliances, High Pressure and Low Pressure. The fourth level, Universal Certification, covers all three areas.

The eight hour course begins with a five-hour day of instruction. Following two weeks of study and a one-hour review with the instructor, participants take the test.

CCC to receive funds for scholarships

Southern Bell Telephone and Wachovia Technical will provide scholarships for deserving students at Cleveland Community College, it was announced today by Bob Scott, president of the North Carolina Department of Community Colleges.

Community Colleges will distribute more than a half million dollars to underwrite 1,048 academic scholarships.

"Scholarships are very important to our colleges," Scott said. "They help attract students to some of the technical and vocational areas where there is great demand in the workplace. As importantly, they allow college to give assistance to some students who simply cannot afford to pay the tuition without the help. This half million dollars will mean a great deal to our colleges."

Corporate scholarships were given by Carolina Power and Light, Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, Southern Bell Telephone Company and Wachovia Bank and Parents will be able to go to their child's classroom and meet teachers.

Trust Company. Other scholarship were sponsored by the North Carolina Masonry Contractors Association. All colleges will receive the North Carolina

Community College Scholarships. Bill Strickland, the Department of Community Colleges' director of student support services, said he hopes more of the state's corporate citizens will join companies already providing scholarships. "The students these scholarships help will play a significant role in the development of the workforce."
