CHERI FULLER Fuller to speak at First Baptist

Nationally-known teacher, author and speaker Cheri Fuller will lead a seminar Sunday at 5:30 p.m. at First Baptist Church on the subject, "Helping Your Child To Succeed In Public Schools.'

A question-answer session will follow until 7 p.m. when Fuller will give her testimony in the Worship Center of the church.

Fuller earned her B.A. and Master's degrees from Baylor University in Waco, Texas. She was a contributing author to "Family Circle," which won the Educational Press Award for excellence in educational journalism.

"Cheri has a great sensitivity to the present needs of American school children and their parents can gain insight into learning styles as she suggest ways to help children learn," said Rev. Chip Sloan, pastor.

The public is invited.

Homecoming

Homecoming will be held Sunday, August 28, at Victory Baptist Church, located on Highway 216 (just off Highway 29) between Kings Mountain and Grover.

Sunday School will begin at 9:45 a.m. and worship service will begin at 11 a.m. The guest speaker will be Rev. Jeff Davis. Following the worship service, a covered dish lunch will be served in the fellowship building. Rev. Dennis Wells, pastor, invites the public.

Musical/drama set at Second Baptist

The King's Kids Children's Choir of Second Baptist Church, 120 Linwood Road, Kings Mountain, will present "And the Show Goes On" Sunday, August 28 at 7 p.m.

The drama is billed as "the greatest and most unusual carnival you've ever seen." Booths have been created by the children and each will tell something about the miracles of Jesus.

Rev. Eugene Land, pastor, invites the public.

Gospel Group to sing at Crowders Mountain

Mountain Baptist Church. The public is invited.

New Kindergarten teacher Page Wells, left, helps Lamar Robertson, Elizabeth Jeffries and Joey Jones build with blocks in their Bethware School classroom. Thursday will be the first full day of school of the fall term for local Kindergarten students.

Clifford the Dog makes learning fun at Bethware

Wells didn't want to teach school.

As a child growing up in Kings Mountain, she wanted to follow in the footsteps of her mother, a veteran elementary teacher, and last week her dream came true classroom at Bethware School.

For a week before school opened, Page and her assistant Kim Franks put up Clifford the Dog posters, and created colorful centers for such activities as block building, housekeeping, play houses, shopping carts, and reading and art.

The Kindergarten Class may be the most visually exciting classroom in the entire school, according to Lamar Robertson, Elizabeth Jeffries and Joey Jones.

"It's fun," came the chorus of voices, as they played with blocks on the floor of the spacious classroom which has a multitude of fun things to keep five-yearolds busy and happy.

Joey demonstrated that he could count to 20 and all three students said they could sing the "ABC Song." Their favorite animal on the wall was, you guessed it,

There wasn't a time in her young life that Page now teaches a reading lab at Rhyne Elementary in Gastonia. Mr. Wells works at KMG Minerals. The other member of the family, Bryant Wells, works for Preparation Machinery Services.

On the fourth day of the new school term Tuesday, when 22 Kindergarten students entered Page's first everything was running smoothly in Wells' classroom. Kindergarten students went home at noon the first week of school but Thursday the school bells won't ring for dismissal until 2:20 p.m.

Wells and her assistant, also a first year teacher, have numerous lesson plans and fun things to keep the children learning and happy all day long.

'We've cut out dolls and dogs and put up everything with love," said Page, who graduated last December from UNC at Charlotte. Wells says she's excited to be teaching in her hometown. After school, she enjoys walking, tennis, and reading. She is active in First Baptist Church.
