Biographer Walker to review her book

Biographer Marianne Walker will review her best seller, "Margaret Mitchell and John Marsh: the Love Story Behind Gone With The Wind," at Kings Mountain High School Library Sunday.

The 3 p.m. program is sponsored by the KMHS English Department and is free to the public.

Walker is a professor of English at Henderson Community College. She drew information from her book from personal family letters she received from the late sister of Mr. Marsh.

Walker's book offers a new look into Mitchell's marriage to Marsh, their devotion and unique partnership after Mitchell jilted Marsh for Marsh' roommate, Red Upshaw. Walker said that Marsh was best man at that wedding which lasted only 18 months and has pictures of the wedding scene which depicts Marsh looking at the bride instead of the camera.

INDUSTRY

Anvil Knits and Clevefont Mills put in new screening systems.

Spectrum, the city's largest water user, installed two different types of heat recovery, newer high efficiency boilers, and an automated acid system. Spectrum is trying new dye products to more effectively reduce chlorides, metals and other pollutants.

Pretreatment operators of Motor Panels, Anvil, Clevefont, PMDC and Eaton attended wastewater school and were certified by the state.

Ollis challenged local industry to upgrade materials and tool up for more competitive demands from the international market.

"Our companies will need to commit a major portion of their planning, effort and resources, plus innovative thinking, to stay ahead or they will find themselves further and further behind," he said.

Mayor Scott Neisler congratulated industry for "doing a top notch job in pretreatment procedures."

Utility chairman Jim Guyton, commissioner from Ward 2, was also a guest.
