

Sims Street is realigned

City crews are realigning South Sims Street to eliminate the offset of Sims in front of Home Federal Savings Bank.

Recently the city and First Baptist Church traded a piece of property for the realignment and for future expansion of the church for a parking lot.

Public Works Supt. Karl Moss said he is hopeful that the State Department of Transportation will approve a stoplight.

"A turn lane and stoplight are much needed in this area," said Wanza Davis, church treasurer. She said the church is appreciative of the city for widening the street.

The church is enlarging its parking area.

Kings Mountain says goodbye to Chuck Nance

City Council said goodbye to City Manager Chuck Nance Tuesday, unanimously accepted his resignation after nearly a year on the job and presented him a service plaque.

By a vote of 5-1 with Councilman Jim Guyton voting "no" and Councilman Phil Hager absent, Mayor Scott Neisler presented a plaque "for distinguished service" and a framed resolution to Nance who is leaving the city to go into private business in his hometown of Rutherford County.

As he did when Nance came to the position last July replacing George Wood, Guyton voted "no" on the service plaque. He had stated his reason last July that the city manager should be required to reside in the city. Nance has been commuting from Spindale to Kings Mountain.

Nance did not comment and neither did commissioners but Nance quickly moved from his place at a staff table he shares with City

Attorney Mickey Corry and shook the hands of all six council members present and the mayor.

Nance's last day with the city will be August 1.
