McDaniel sees challenge in Register of Deeds office

JONAH INGLE

Jonah Ingle wins Eagle Scout award

Troop 92 Eagle Scout Jonah Ingle was presented Scouting's highest award April 14 at services at East Gold Street Wesleyan Church of which he is a member.

Scoutmaster Jim Ferebee of First Baptist Church sponsored Troop 92 made the presentation. Ingle also received his father's Eagle Scout badge he earned in 1967.

Ingle is the son of Steve and Betty Ingle and the brother of Benji Ingle. He is the grandson of Betty and Bill Hudson and Ollie and Joe Wheeler.

Ingle received congratulatory cards from President and Mrs. Bill Clinton, Governor Jim Hunt and US Congresswoman Sue Myrick and other Senate representatives.

Paul Ledford, Vice-President of American Monforts, was guest speaker and challenged Jonah and encouraged other young men to become involved in Scouting.

A reception was held at the Ingle home after the awards program.

Jane VanHoy McDaniel got a taste of some of the responsibilities of a Register of Deeds as a legal secretary in Shelby working for six years for now Superior Court Judge Don Bridges.

She had the occasion to visit that county office from time to time and liked what she saw. McDaniel wants to implement some of her ideas in running the six-person office.

McDANIEL McDaniel left the law firm of Bridges & Gilbert in 1995 to join Wilson Real Estate in Shelby as office manager.

Her father, retired Highway Patrol Sgt. E. T. Van Hoy, is stepping down after his first term on the board of county commissioners but with Jane's entry into the political arena the family is solidly behind her.

"We had talked politics at our house for a long time and all of us agree that the Register of Deeds job is a hands-on job and would present a challenge," said McDaniel.

A 1973 graduate of Shelby High School, McDaniel earned her Associate Degree from King's college in Charlotte in 1975 and has completed various computer courses and is a notary public. Her first job after college was as a teller and later accounting supervisor at First Federal Savings & Loan in Shelby where she worked 14 years. She is a member of first Baptist Church of Shelby and the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. A Democrat, she is active in Democratic Women of Cleveland County and is third vice-chairman at Precinct No. 5. She is married to Bill McDaniel and they have two children, Justin, 16, and Trevor, 12. Her immediate family, in addition to her parents, includes her brother, Shelby Police Chief of Police Charlie VanHoy.

Her hobbies are playing piano, gardening and sports.

"It's important that everyone vote May 7 because the next Register of Deeds will be elected in the Primary since there is no Republican opposition," she said.

McBrayer roots deep in county

John McBrayer, candidate for county commissioner in the May 7 Primary, sees crime and drugs as the major problems facing Cleveland County residents.

McBrayer says citizens should back county law enforcement and support the hiring of additional officers in the various agencies. He started his campaign by riding with some of the county officers and seeing first-hand the rise of crime in the county.

"We're losing too much tax business to other counties that land industry that we need here for more jobs," said McBrayer, who sees his experience in sales as a plus on the county board.

McBrayer is also pushing for a new reservoir for the county and says commissioners need to get behind this very necessary project.

"Citizens are going to have to get more seriously involved in their communities to see good things happen for Cleveland County," said McBrayer who said that he tossed his hat into the political ring because he wanted to see all of Cleveland County grow.

A life-long Democrat, McBrayer is active on the Cleveland County Planning Board which is looking at zoning problems which could lead in the future to county wide zoning.

"Zoning is one of the issues that elected officials will need to look at in the future," he said.

McBrayer is a fourth generation member of his family to live on the McBrayer homeplace, a farm purchased in 1853 on Highway 74 one mile east of Mooresboro. Although he and his wife reside in Shelby, he retains his office at the farm where he raises cattle and owns and operates a rental business. He also oversees a sales territory from Kings Mountain to Murphy for Southern Pump & Tank.

"I returned to my home county in 1975 when my mother died but had traveled the east coast for nine years and was with Hot Point-GE as a salesman for 18 years in Florida, New Orleans, Alabama and Mississippi," he said.

At the age of 33 McBrayer was one of the youngest sales managers for Hot Point and during a five year period he said he increased sales from 1.5 to 6.3 million dollars.

"Sales experience is really my strength and I'd like to use that experience on the county board to sell Cleveland County as the place to live and work," he said.

Son of the late Yates E. Y. and Helen Blanton McBrayer, he is married to Lois Stanley McBrayer. McBrayer's daughter, Maurisa Allsep is from Greenville, SC and Mrs. McBrayer's son, Keith Davis, is a Cleveland County jailer. Their granddaughter is Veronica Chelsey Hass, 9.

McBrayer is active in Shelby First Baptist Church where he sings in the choir.

Boating, flying and hunting are his hobbies.

NUEMAN

wife of 10 years, has joined him on three of the trips.

During the recent trip the Nuemans set up a library in the Celestial Church.

"We came home with only the clothes on our backs and gave away all our shoes except the ones we wore home," said Mrs. Nueman who said they took seven suitcases full of clothing, Bibles and books to Africa. When they return they plan to take summer-type clothing, the weather is humid, and suitcases full of cotton panties for children up to age 6.

Mrs. Nueman made friends easily with the people, teaching the natives how to cook American foods and working with the young people. She said she planned to take a baby doll to one special friend but the little girl requested only a pencil.

"They can't go to school unless they have their own pencils and they must wear uniforms in most places," said Mrs. Nueman.

"That's how they weed out the undesirables in the school system, they require uniforms and many people can't afford the $2 cost."

Nueman says there is no truancy problem in Nigeria. He bailed one student out of jail when the boy skipped school. The students are easily recognized because they are in uniform.

Mrs. Nueman says most kids are happy to be in school and off the streets where they beg for money and try to sell items to make a living.

"We saw kids running between automobiles begging for money for food and we saw handicapped people lying on the streets and begging and it just broke our hearts," she said.

But Mr. Nueman said a major need of the impoverished areas is water.

"We need to find volunteers to go over and drill wells," he said.

Nueman is associated with World Trade Inc., 136 W. Trade St., Dallas, and receives gifts through that agency. He also operates Faw-T Cleaning Service in Dallas and the family live on Ebenezer Church Road in Kings Mountain where Mrs. Nueman operates Claudia's, a beauty salon.

Mrs. Nueman, a Kings Mountain native, said she had worked in the church all her life but when she went to Africa the first time she realized she had been unfulfilled as a Christian.

Both Nuemans are active in Mount Zion Baptist Church which raised money for a van for a Nigerian church, has hosted a Nigerian preacher and been supportive of the missionary effort.

The Nuemans' four children, Rhonda Kimble, Moses Jr., Samuel and Phaniel Nueman have encouraged the ministry of their parents. Rev. Nueman's mother Veronica and his brothers and sisters, Peter, K. O., Mary, Hannah and Veronica still live in Nigeria and are active in the church and missionary effort.

"We are just so blessed in this country," said Nueman. "And there is so much to be done."
