Healing Force to perform at KMMS

The Healing Force, a Winston-Salem dance and instrumental troupe, will present a 45-minute show as the culmination of Tuesday's Cultural Arts Festival at Kings Mountain Middle School.

In addition to day-long hands-on activities, students will be entertained by four speakers. Barbara Locklear, a professional storyteller from Charlotte, will tell African and Asian folktales. Melissa Rikard, a Middle School teacher, will share her Middle East experiences and a Gardner-Webb University professor will speak about his experiences in Africa.

Seventh grade students will be led by eighth grade students, teachers and parents in making African woven hats and tribal masks, Egyptian beaded jewelry, African tie dye, Egyptian papyrus and Ashanti goodbye cloths.

Art Students will display crafts which will also be for sale. Students will decorate halls, rooms and other school areas in suitable motifs of original art work. Middle School employees Joe Greene and Dathia Sanders will display artifacts of their world travels and students and teachers will dress in costumes from Africa and Asia.

The Cleveland County Arts Council is sponsoring the finale entertainment. The funding for the festival is provided in part through an educational grant awarded by the KM District Educational Foundation. Activities are planned and coordinated by seventh grade teachers.

Bradley awarded scholarship at NC State

David E. Bradley of Kings Mountain has been awarded a scholarship to be used in his studies in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences at North Carolina State University.

Bradley, the son of Joan H. Bradley and Robert L. Bradley, both of Kings Mountain, was awarded the Philip Morris Agricultural Institute

Scholarship. The program was established to encourage, promote, and develop community leadership in the field of agriculture. The recipient must be a student in the Agricultural Institute in the College of Agriculture and Life Sciences and a resident of a tobacco-producing area in any state in the nation.
