Special program set at KM Military Park

The 18th Century Guild of North Carolina will present a variety of portrayals of 18th century artisans and farmers of the Carolina's Piedmont Saturday and Sunday near the Kings Mountain National Military Park visitor center.

The 18th Century Guild of North Carolina is composed of experienced historical interpreters who possess considerable knowledge and hands-on experience in a variety of 18th century craft skills. Each costumed interpreter will utilize a variety of tools in their portrayal of one or more of the following trades: blacksmith, tinsmith, cabinetmaker, farmer, gunsmith, militiaman, horner, and leather worker.

The Battle of Kings Mountain is known for its pivotal role in the Southern Campaign of the American Revolution. The men who fought at Kings Mountain were not only skilled in the use of the rifle, but many were also skilled craftsmen who had carved a lifestyle in the frontier settlements and towns. Other civilians during the 1700s often supported the military with their goods and services. The guild members will discuss the lifestyles of the Revolutionary War period and how the craftsmen contributed to the Revolutionary War effort.

Individual members of the guild have participated in interpretive events at such locations as Yorktown, Ninety Six National Historic Site, Guilford Courthouse and numerous local and state historic sites. The park is extremely excited to be able to bring another perspective to the forefront of the interpretive program at Kings Mountain.

Saturday's events will begin at 10 a.m. and last until 5 p.m.

Sunday's events will begin at 9 a.m. and end at 3 p.m.

The public invited. Admission is free.
